PIONEER WASHER.
JAMES BRUSIE,
AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public. It is unrivalled for its simplicity, durability and the rapidity and ease of its action. Washing the dirtiest clothes perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and lasting, with proper care, for ten years. The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing. It is easily worked by one person.

This Machine captured the Special Premium at the California State Fair, and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to old house-keepers and families and washing men and washing women.

It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California, and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it.

The undersigned is now in the city of Portland, where he can be seen at Mr. O. Kilbourn's Store, corner of Front and Yamhill Sts., East side, Portland, and is prepared to furnish the Machine to purchasers and also to sell and dispose of County Rights for the sale of the same

A Sensible Indian Policy at Last

Gen Sherman has something of a character for being thoroughly and practical The following dispatch from him to Gen Hancock as showing that he accepts the Indian "situation" and is determined to act upon the "military necessity" presented by Indian affairs on the Plains will lose him nothing in the estimation of those who know anything of the Indian character He says

We must clean out all Indians between the Platte and the Arkansas rivers then proceed in force against hostile tribes beyond those rivers. We must not remain on the defensive but follow and attack on all possible occasion

This, of course, will horrify those sentimentalists who have acquired their only notions of Indians from poetry and romance, but to the people of the Western border, the Plains and the Pacific coast who have experienced something of the Indian perfidy and fiendish barbarism of the Indians, it will appear as the utterance of a man of practical good sense, who has been studying the Indian at home, rather than in the pages of a gilt bound volume of Cooper or Long follow "Clean out all Indians" sounds Western and means business There are no blankets and powder, no "talks" and patched up treaties in that sort of language. It has not got a word or a letter of foolishness in it It is the key to the only policy that will ever be successful, in dealing with the Indians If "cleaning them out" had been the motto of the government from the start the country would have had fewer occasions to shudder at some devilish atrocity perpetrated by sneaking, perfidious, murdering savages Blankets and beads and kindness never made an Indian a friend, or trustworthy in his most solemn engagements If he is "cleaned out and and made afraid, he is safe, but never under any other circumstances We never read a paragraph about the efforts of the military and civil authorities, to settle the troubles on the Plains, by conferences and treaties without a sort of indignation at the blindness of the philanthropy which prompted them Treaties and gifts never had any effect upon an Indian except to cultivate his cupidity and embolden his ferocity They serve to convince him that the whites are afraid to fight him, they never carry any conviction to him that the whites act upon the dictates of humanity; he has no glimmer of a conception of what humanity is. A purchased peace with an Indian may be good till his blankets get thin or he wants a horse or something else which a defenceless white man may have, then he buries the pipe and takes up the tomahawk. Gen Sherman's policy, carried out energetically and thoroughly, will do more to one campaign to convert the Indians to peace notions, than all the pow wows and bribes ever held or offered When an Indian is "followed and attacked" and "cleaned out," he becomes a faithful party to a peace compact when his good behavior is bought, he soon makes it necessary to buy him again.

The Northern Pacific Railroad

We notice that the Massachusetts Legislature has recently been taking action upon the subject of the Northern Pacific Railroad A committee having had the matter under consideration, reported resolutions requesting the Massachusetts Senators and Congressmen to vote for such national aid to a road from Lake Superior to the Columbia river and Puget Sound, as will secure the immediate construction The resolutions go upon the ground that the central road, now in course of construction, will benefit the middle States, without much advantage to the northwest, the Great Lakes States and New England; and that, therefore, the Northern road is a vital necessity Massachusetts is the sixth State whose Legislature has passed similar resolutions within the last year The Boston Board of Trade, officially endorsed the scheme in 1865 The Boston Post says of it

> The c on of our great inland seas with t at l the Columbia River will mode of transit across the l ovelop the richest mineral y within our borders, and the vast region upon the r b l e control, Commercially he building of this road is de at the General Government e p so the same support that corded to the Central or We believe no investment of the p c credit will yield so large returns as its loan in aid of these roads to connect the two oceans maintained as they will be by the trade of Europe and Asia (saving a distance of upwards of nine thousand miles), as well as the immense local business that will increase with each mile of constructed road, lessening the cost of the precious metals, by reducing the cost of supplies, the transportation of machinery, and filling up our vast Western domain with an industrious population New England is well represented in the management of both these enterprises, and while the Central States will be benefitted by the Central Line, the Northwestern States, those bordering upon the Lakes, and those of New England, must look to the Northern for immediate and direct advantages

Preparing to grant a Pardon.

The New York World speaking of the release on bail of Jeff Davis, says "His present freedom will result in a few days in eliciting the fact that he cannot be tried on the charge of high treason The Attorney General is said to take this view of the case." The developments of the last few month make it highly probable that, instead of being tried on any charge, Davis will soon be the recipient of a full pardon at the hands of the President To say that the Attorney-General thinks he cannot be tried for treason, is equivalent to saying that Andrew Johnson thinks so; for the one has no opinions which the other has not If the two think Davis guiltless of high treason, he will never be tried A pardon will be thrust between him and the courts. The World does not speak of a pardon, but the above announcement is sufficient to show that the way is being prepared. His release was the occasion of an exciting discussion in the Cabinet, during which the Attorney General expressed the opinion cited Within the next three months Jeff Davis will pocket the parchment which will absolve him of all political offense, so far as the President's official signature can do it After all, it may be quite as well that the farce of his arrest, imprisonment and release, should end in that way If the treason of the lesser lights is to be elevated to dignity and respectability, we can see no reason why Jeff Davis should be excluded from the benefits of the general scheme—his treason was certainly no less than theirs

ANOTHER MILTON —It is reported that Minister Clay is negotiating with the Russian-American Company for the purchase of their forts, warehouses and other fixed property in the Territory of Alaska. The price asked is $1,000,000 In this connection it is gratifying to know that the value of the new purchase improves with time and investigation Senator Sumner's speech makes it out a sort of polar Paradise and already the office-seekers are beginning to bedevil the President for appointments Two appointments for Governor and three months yet to receive other applications

FROM CANYON CITY

The Mountaineer's correspondent at Canyon City under date of June 30th, writes

Last week a man named Jas Kelly was so badly injured, from the effects of which he died by the caving of a bank in Dallas & Co's claims

The hydraulic diggings, discovered last Fall on the North Fork, near Otter Bar by "Texas" are reported to be paying well, and being extensive

An attempt was made by some party or parties unknown to the public the night before last, to set the city on fire, but it was discovered before any injury was done If the parties had been discovered in the act, I think their vertebra would have grown at least an inch shortly thereafter

The weather has been very hot for the past week, ranging as high as 98 degrees in the shade

FROM IDAHO

We clip the following items from the Idaho World of the 20th ult

MINING AT PIONEER

A friend who lives in Pioneer City writes to us that "a Portuguese company on Orleans Bar, opposite this place, made a clean up after a run of thirteen nights—not working in day time—and the product was one hundred and ten ounces The same company's previous clean up, after a run of eleven nights, netted one hundred and nine ounces and five dollars In the claims of Wilson & Gibberson one week's run of three sluices has yielded seven thousand dollars Davis & Co's claim next below on the Bar has just given up wards of two thousand dollars after a week's run Products like these indicate that Pioneer City is very much above being a "played out" mining district

A STAMPEDE

We have information of a small stampede of prospectors on Thursday morning who left from about here and took over the mountain on the south side of Moore's creek in quest of some newly discovered very rich gold diggings said to be only five miles from here We have not a doubt as to rich diggings being found almost anywhere within five miles from here if those who look for them will but apply fair industry and perseverence in the task.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT HIMSELF

From Sheppard, Wells, Fargo & Co's messenger, we learn that, a few days ago, a Frenchman, name not known living in Burnt River Valley accidentally shot himself through the upper arm with his own Henry rifle The bone was completely shattered and it was feared that the poor fellow would lose his life from the wound

The following news is from the Indianola of the 20th ult

INDIAN FIGHT—MUTUAL DEPREDATIONS.

A correspondent at Owyhee Ferry writes The Government Express from Camp C F Smith has just arrived at this place, bringing the news of an Indian fight in which ten bucks were sent to their happy hunting grounds on the green islands below the setting sun This is the first installment under Gen Crook's Summer Campaign It appears that "signs" had been discovered in the vicinity of Camp Smith Gen Crook immediately dispatched Archy McIntosh, one of his scouts, with fourteen Indians, to reconnoitre At the base of Stein's Mountain they surprised a camp, consisting of ten bucks, three squaws and one boy A fight ensued in which ten bucks were killed They squaws and boy were taken prisoners, one squaw escaped, another, in making a similar attempt, was wounded, fell into Wild Horse creek and was drowned Archy and party received no harm, except one Indian, who was shot in the shoulder They brought one squaw and the boy into camp, it is thought that valuable information can be extracted from them

The "Lo" family appear to be thoroughly prepared for war; all the arrows found in their camp were poisoned Our informant states that Archy and party produced quite a sensation as they came dashing into camp with the scalps of the enemy, yet dripping with blood, dangling from the horses' bridles

In about two or three weeks Gen Crook will start four or five hundred of Uncle Sam's boys on the war path A big fight is expected By the most reliable information obtained we learn that large parties of Indians are gathering together in the vicinity of Dundor and Bilxen creek, not far from Camp Warner It is thought that they will muster some seven or eight hundred warriors.

FROM YREKA

The Salmon City News of June 29th, has the following items

A fisherman at the Lake, fifteen miles from Salmon City, killed an Indian, on the 15th, for stealing his seine.

A large number of persons have gone off prospecting to Big Horse Prairie, fifty miles from Salmon, on the road to Bannack, where rich diggings are reported

One hundred men left Salmon City and a large additional number stampeded from Leesburg on the 15th and 16th, in search of reported rich discoveries on the head of Little Lost river, sixty to eighty miles south of Salmon City.

A man named Tracy stole $250 in greenbacks from D. White, who keeps a restaurant in Leesburg. He was followed to Sierra Gulch, caught, and, under threats of hanging, forked over the money and left.

Geo B Brower reports he has discovered a mammoth quartz ledge forty five miles east of Salmon City, from forty to sixty feet wide, and two miles long. It is called the "Pleason District," and Mr Brower is Recorder of quartz claims there.

A nugget worth $70 was found by a prospector on Salmon river, fifteen miles above the city, a few days ago.

A difficulty occurred near Wood river, Camas Prairie, a short time since, between some traders from Boise and a small band of Bannock Indians, in which one Indian was accidentally killed. The Indians were peaceable.

A letter to the World says: Everything is overdone. Flour is from $8 to $10 per 100 lbs, beef, 20 to 25 cts per lb, oysters $1 per can, duck pants, $2 per pair, gum boots, $11 50 per pair; leather, $6 50, and everything else in proportion Lawyers, miners and merchants all ranch themselves, so that hotel business is played out Board is $15 per week, meals $1 I have not seen $100 since I have been here. Every one seems broke I would say to one and all, stay where you are The whole country seems a mystery—one half blown up by eruptions, and a pity the other half wasn't blown away

THREE MEN DROWNED —On Tuesday afternoon as Wm. Meyer, John Miller, E Cook, of Rockland, and an Indian, were boating down the river in a small boat, on their way home from this city, and when opposite Crates Point, their boat was struck suddenly by a squall, and the sheet being "made fast," was capsized. Parties on shore seeing the boat go over, immediately went to the rescue, but the waves were running so high that only one boat succeeded in reaching the wreck, and it was so small that it could take in but one man At the time the boat arrived at the wreck there were but two of the men left, Cook and the Indian, the other two had already found a watery grave Cook was taken into the boat with great difficulty and got ashore, and was taken care of by his friends and neighbors The Indian was left hanging to the boat and was no doubt shortly afterwards drowned Wm Meyer was sailing the boat and understood the management of it very well, but he was of the opinion that the boat could not be upset, and therefore had become careless He was a single man and was well respected by all his neighbors John Miller leaves a wife and five small children to mourn his loss He was an industrious and hard working man, and came to town in the morning for the purpose of buying a cradle as he intended in a few days to commence cutting his grain We did not learn where the Indian belonged The drowning of these men has cast a gloom over all the settlers, as they were respected and honored by all The most of the settlers of Rockland were preparing to come to the city to celebrate the Fourth but their cup of sorrow was full, so they remained at home Sheriff's Schuster's son and a man whose name we did not learn, were the parties who rescued Cook Young Schuster says he would not have ventured out in so small a boat, but he thought his father was among the unfortunates They deserve great credit, however, for their bravery as it was in imminent risk of their own lives —Mountaineer, July 6th

ENGLISH AND FRENCH THIEVES —Seven English and seven French thieves started on their predatory expedition through the exhibition, and agreed to meet at a café in the boulevards or rather at a restaurateur's, where they had previously engaged a cabinet particulier and had ordered a supper to be "stood" by the vanquished They met at the appointed hour, and you will be proud of your countryman's superiority when you learn that they triumphantly displayed forty five watches and nine portemonnaies, whereas the French tyros on the noble art could display but ten watches, three portemonnaies and half a dozen handkerchiefs, "small deer" which are disdained by the professed pickpocket and are only fak'ed" during a novitiate in the profession They magnanimously avowed themselves vanquished, and agreed to recognize the superiority of the victors in the form most pleasing to them by standing half a dozen of champagne followed by bowls of blazing punch in quick succession Up to this stage all had been highly gratifying to our national pride, but the hour of Britain's humiliation was drawing nigh Our countrymen fell under the table their hosts though they had not read the tale of Falstaff's disaster at Gadshill, fell upon their prostrate foes, eased them of their plunder, and retired in triumph with the forty five watches the purses, &c and moreover left the waiters instructions to apply for payment of the bill to the gentlemen up stairs on the floor —Paris Correo

SUDDEN CHANGES OF WEATHER are productive of Throat Diseases, Coughs, Colds &c. There is no more effectual relief in these diseases to be found than in the timely use of Brown's Bronchial Troches. They possess real merit and have proved their efficacy by a test of many years having received testimonials from eminent men who have used them

A man by the name of Cranfield at the Dalles says the State Journal last night attempted to drown his children's troubled spirit over the river, when the wind came from troubled and the watery arm rent Fortunately, for him the fracture of plums and spirits proved too much for his weak system an application of the stomach pump made him disgorge

A SPLENDID INSTRUMENT —We saw, yesterday, at J L Parrish & Co's something new in the way of an organ —a French instrument called the Organ Harmonium—invented by Alphonse Rodolphe It is a very considerable modification of the organ as we have them from the American manufactories. It is provided with sixteen stops each of which exercises a distinct and peculiar effect upon the tone. The base stops are the Forte Tenor Boux (soft, sweet) Basson, Clarion Bourdon, English Horn; the treble stops are Expression Tremolo, Flutes Bouches Flute, Clarinette, Fife, Hautboie Voix Celeste Forte and Knee or Full Expression The effect of these stops in changing the tone is most surprising For instance from the flute to Voix Celeste with Full Expression the transition from what seems precisely like a soft flute, to the full grand instrument which we would expect from an Italian choir—up to the power in the Key Board is movable and can be adjusted to any key to any instrument, or to the voice of any singer Other changes are no less surprising The instruments are of the most perfect workmanship and of the highest finish have taken the first medals at all the great European Expositions The prices range from $175, to $500 Persons in want of an instrument should call and see them for it is impossible to get a correct idea of them except from personal inspection J L. Parrish & Co. are sole agents for the Pacific coast.

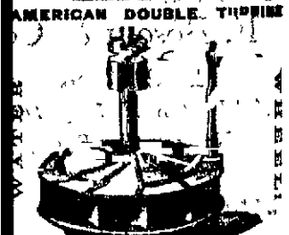
AMERICAN DOUBLE TURBINE


CHINESE WHEELS, unequaled and unrivaled in the United States or the world, have been fully tested this coast, more than forty being in use at this date, driving all kinds of machinery: Saw Mills, Flour Mills, Quartz Mills, Woolen Factories, &c., &c.
On account of the late calamity to the OREGON THRESHER we have lost a few Wheels, but of these same we have a good supply, therefore those contemplating using Wheels need not be disappointed, but forward their order at once, accompanied with the CASH, which we need more than the Wheels.
We cheerfully refer to all using our wheels, and are convinced that all will affirm that our wheels surpass in all and even more than we claim for them.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The net proceeds of the late concert given by the Philharmonic Society for the benefit of the poor of this city, have only within a few days been ascertained. The total receipts were $562 50. The expenses were as follows: H. G. Grob, services at extra Society rehearsals, $75; do. services at Concert, volunteered; $2 50; Randall, bill for use of room for extra rehearsals, including piano and gas, as discounted, $7 50; Lappens & Knowles' bill for use of Hall, as discounted, $40 50; W. D. Carter, bill for printing, as discounted, $25 50; S. J. McCormick, bill for paper for programme, as discounted, $9; W. T. Shanahan, bill for tuning piano, as discounted, $3; Holman & Co., draying piano, $7; Oregonian, bill for advertising, $12; Herald, bill for advertising, $12 50, donated, total, $110 50; net proceeds, $452.

At the first regular meeting of the Society, subsequent to the concert, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, by the Portland Philharmonic Society, That in behalf of the poor of this city a vote of thanks be and is hereby tendered to H. G. Grob for services rendered at concert, to the Oregonian and Herald for gratuitous advertising, to Messrs. E. G. Randall, S. J. McCormick, W. D. Carter, W. T. Shanahan and Lappens & Knowles, for liberally discounting their several bills; and to Messrs. Hogan & Co., Bills & Co., Camp & Co., and Holman & Co. for drayages, for which they made no charge.

Various opinions prevailing among the members as to the method of disbursing the money received so as to do the greatest good to the greatest number, the whole matter was referred to a committee. The committee subsequently made the following report, which was adopted by the Society:

To the Portland Philharmonic Society.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: Your committee appointed June 21st, 1867, and instructed to report a plan for distributing the funds realized from the late concert, given by this society for the benefit of the indigent of the city, beg leave to submit the following:

Your committee have conversed freely with members of this society, and also with several other citizens upon the subject, and from not a few of them we have received excellent information respecting the several benevolent societies now in existence, together with many valuable suggestions as to the best manner of distributing the said funds; all of which favors we thankfully acknowledge.

Among the many plans considered by this committee, there is but one that we deem wisely practicable, and that will fully and exactly meet the exigencies of the case. This plan is an earnest recommendation, that our citizens immediately undertake the formation of a Portland Benevolent Association upon such a basis and in such a manner as to include in its representation each and every denomination of the place, a society such as will receive the patronage and be the pride of every Portlander, and in which all may claim an interest.

This committee feel assured that an association of this kind can easily be formed, and, if formed upon the general principle, by the name and for the purpose above, it cannot fail to be eminently prosperous, thoroughly efficient and permanent. We are satisfied that our city is in need of just such a society, its population will justify it, the present will warrant it, and its poor demand it. The society of this character, when organized, we are in hope of giving the said funds, and believing that an immediate influx will be the result of such an organization, your committee recommend that the aforesaid funds be for the present retained by this society.

Jacob Kuhn vs D. Fleischner—continued until next term of court. Plaintiff allowed until first day of next term to file reply.

W. M. King vs A. L. Marshal and wife—default entered.

MARKET REVIEW.—In our review of the markets heretofore, we have entirely omitted one important branch, which we hasten to place before our readers, to make up for past omissions. If the following should prove entirely correct, we ask those who discover the errors, to make the corrections:

Hops—Scarce. Old stock exhausted and the new will be a complete failure.

Vitus—Old growth nearly consumed. Young growth—prospects very promising.

Wheat—None in the market.

Potatoes—First quality scarce; none to be disposed of. Second quality easily bought on speculation at 100 per cent. discount.

Prudence—All in the hands of old stock holders.

Modesty—Stock badly damaged. None for sale.

Vice—Market overstocked.

Pride—Market glutted.

Politeness—Cheap. Holders unwilling to dispose of stock at ruling rates.

Scandal—None at wholesale. Dealt in chiefly by hawkers and peddlers at retail.

Religion—None genuine on hand. Stock generally adulterated. Very few investments.

Love—None offered, except for greenbacks.

Talent—Scarce article. Sold extensively for gold.

Gambling—Out of fashion.

Rum—Plenty in market, and disposed of by holders with very little regard to margin.

Happiness—Holders too scarce and will not sell at any price,—but will barter for love.

GUNS.—Printers are much like other people. They have a great admiration for the fair sex, and indulge their evil inclinations as do most other people, when it accords with the passion which actuate their philanthropy. Last Tuesday one of our compositors went and married, and paired himself with a fair daughter of Rev. C. Kelly. The occurrence took place on Tuesday, the 2d day of July. The notice would have read the 4th; but being Sunday, Mr. Enoch Turner and Miss Laura J. Kelly, daughter of Rev. C. Kelly. The worthy father exhibited his willingness for our typo friend to take the charge of his daughter, by himself tying the nuptial knot. May the union prove indissoluble —no secession, revolution or internal dissensions mar the smooth current of their married life.

RABID ANIMAL.—Hiram Bennett, 10 years old, son of Wm. H. Bennett, was very badly bitten by a large Newfoundland dog, belonging to Mr. John H. Hayden. The boy received three severe wounds, two in the groin and one in the calf of the leg. The boy was playing with Mr. Hayden's children in the yard of Mr. H., and he declares fell down, when the dog pitched on the boy and bit him as above. Mr. Hayden, sensible man as he is, immediately killed the dog and informed Mr. Bennett that he would do all that money could accomplish to assuage the terrible wounds inflicted upon the boy.

DOGS.—By some means or another, the man appointed by Capt. Hoyt to kill dogs was relieved of his duty. Is it not time that the butchering of dogs had again commenced. No sooner had the authorities ceased killing, than the dogs began to increase, until now the city is nearly alive with them. Several times have persons been bitten of late, and danger is reasonably apprehended by those whose duties are such as to require them to go out their way home late at night. We say kill the animals, unless the requirements of the law are complied with.

RAIN.—The copious rains of the past few days has had a very perceptible effect on the atmosphere. Besides this it has been of incalculable benefit to the growing crop of wheat. One gentleman, who ought to know, informs us that it has added at least 25 per cent. to the crop. Another gentleman that it would require many thousands of dollars to cover the direct benefit to the commerce of the Willamette by the late showers. Verily the rain came in a good time.

THANKS.—We had intended before this to publicly thank the Clerks respectively of the United States District Court and the Circuit Court for Multnomah county, for the favors they have extended to this paper in the way of abstracts of the proceedings of these courts. Mr. Coulson, of the Circuit Court, nor Mr. Wilcox, of the U. S. District Court, have never failed to furnish us with the proceedings of interest transpiring in their respective tribunals.

CAPT. JAYNES.—This gentlemanly military officer, who is in command at Fort Stevens, won the respect and esteem of all the excursionists aboard the Chuch on her recent trip to the Fourth, by his more than kind reception of his visitors at the Fort. He is at all times happy to receive visitors, except on the Sabbath. Excursionists need have no fears, but what they will pass a gay time at the Fort while Capt. Gaynes is in command.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.—In this court yesterday, before Judge Deady, the trial of Dr. Davenport for perjury in making his income return, was commenced, and the evidence for the prosecution and defense all closed. The argument will begin this morning at 10 o'clock. Undoubtedly a fine forensic effort will be made by Gov. Gibbs for the United States, and by Messrs. Logan, Page and Grimble for the defense.

RECORDER'S COURT.—In this court yesterday the case of Florence Donahue was continued until this morning, and is under bonds of $50. He is held to appear for an assault on Mr. Phillips, his brother-in-law. Jacob Hennaskefek and Kate Brown, for disorderly conduct, was fined $5. Benj. S. Wesley was fined $5, and ditto John Chapman, who "fighted" with Mr. W., $5.

CORRECTION.—In our notice of the Summer House at Clatsop, we called William Lattie by the name of John Lattie, or the compositor did it for us. This is decidedly wrong—we did not intend to transmogrify William into John, nor John into William. We now correct the item and state that "William" Lattie keeps the Summer House at Clatsop, instead of "John."

DEBATE.—Hon. Isaac Cox and G. W. Lawson, of Salem, have advertised to debate their important question at Oro Fino Hall on the 15th of July. This debate will be of interest, and undoubtedly a large crowd will be in attendance. The admission fee is merely nominal. For particulars see advertisement.

The local of the Dayton, (Ohio,) Journal, tells of a Mrs Wade, near that town who is the mother of three little girls so much alike that to know Sarah from Jane or Jane from Mary, she adorns their necks with red, white and blue necklaces.

MASONIC CHURCH.—The necessary excavation for a basement to the Methodist Church has been completed, and workmen are engaged in laying a very substantial, stone wall, for the foundation of the building, which is 65 by 107 feet in size. The location, on the corner of Third and Taylor streets, is certainly a well chosen spot for the edifice.

BANKRUPTCY.—It was supposed that many applications would be made at an early day for the privilege of being declared a bankrupt, but so far only three applicants have availed themselves of the opportunity: Wm. S. Laventhal, for whom J. G. Chapman is attorney, and Anton Klauey, for whom W. W. Page is attorney.

NEW BOOKS.—The following new books have just been added to the Portland Library: Decisive Battles of the War, by Swinton, Life of Carl Ritter, by Gage; United States Debt, Finances and Taxation, by Gibbons; The Jumping Frog, by Twain, "Swinging Round the Cercle," by Nasby; "Good English," by Gould.

PLEASURE RIDE.—An Indian unconscious from the too free use of "fire-water," was yesterday tendered and accepted, a free ride, and by policeman Blake was placed aboard a fashionable dray and toted off to the city jail. So far as any outward signs were concerned he seemed to enjoy the ride as one of pleasure.

BROKE THROUGH THE WHARF.—Yesterday a truck loaded with four tons of flour, broke through the flooring of Couch's Wharf. One wheel sunk down to the hub—no damage resulted, however, except to the flooring, which was repaired by workmen in less than an hour after the accident.

RESIGNED.—We have good authority for stating that R. Williams, Esq., lately appointed United States District Attorney for Oregon, has resigned, and that John Cartwright, Esq., of Salem, has been recommended, and will probably be appointed to fill the position.

IMPROVEMENT.—We were informed yesterday that the proprietors of Couch's Wharf intend, as soon as the high waters recede, to lay a new flooring over the old one, of 4-inch plank, to be laid at right angles with the present one. A very good arrangement.

NOTICE.—Any person having papers or other articles taken from the ruins of the Oregon Iron Works, will please deliver them to Governor Gibbs, at his office in Carter's building, Alder street, between Front and First.

FOR THE PENITENTIARY.—Sheriff Ferguson of Wasco county, having in charge Matthias Ming, sentenced to the penitentiary at Salem for five years, having been convicted of arson, arrived yesterday en route for Salem.

PRODUCE.—The Senator brought down yesterday freight as follows: 13 bales wool, 1,417 flour, 1 hf bbl butter, 1 organ, 30 sacks flour.

THE TROUP.—This steamer yesterday brought from Springville, 20 tons of wheat to be shipped on the Ajax, for San Francisco.

MEDICAL CARD.—W. B. Diefenbach advertises in this morning's paper his Private Medical Dispensary, corner of Oak and First streets, to which we call attention.

THE WISE AWARDS will play this evening at half-past five o'clock. The members are requested to be present.

HORACE GREELEY.—Horace Greeley was refused admittance to Speaker Colfax's reception on account of the shabby clothes he wore, and only gained an entrance by being recognized. Had he a suit of Barnum Bros.' fine or common clothing, he would not have met with this humiliation. For fear some other Horace Greeley might be snubbed in the same way, all had better go to Barnum Bros., corner Front and Morrison streets, and buy a suit immediately. Prices—A No. 1 suits, $13 to $30; white shirts, $1 00 to $2 25; casimere pants, $5 50 to $6 25; rubber hats, 50 cents.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF IDAHO—BOISE CITY, I. T.—Organized March 11th, 1867, (with circulation) under Act of Congress, approved June 3d, 1864. Authorized capital $500,000. Paid up capital, $100,000. B. CHOLERA.
MR. PERRY DAVIS:—The benefits I have received from the use of your invaluable remedy, the Pain Killer, induces me to pen a word in its praise. Experience has convinced me that for Headache, Indigestion, Pain in the Stomach, or any other part of the system, severe Chills, Weariness, common Colds, Hoarseness, CHOLERA, CHOLERA MORBUS, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Toothache, etc., THERE IS NOTHING BETTER THAN THE PAIN KILLER. I have this hour recovered from a severe attack of the Sick Headache, by using two, teaspoonful, taken at thirty minutes interval, in a wine glass full of hot water. I am confident, through the blessing of God, it saved me from the cholera in the summer of 1849. Travelling amid heat, dust, toil, change of diet, and constant exposure to an infected atmosphere, my system was daily predisposed to dysentery attacks, accompanied with pain, for which the Pain Killer was a sovereign remedy, one teaspoonful curing the worse case in an hour, or, at the most, half a day. I have heard of many cases of Dysentery being cured by its use. Put in the teeth, it will stop the toothache. Gratitude, and a desire for its general use, has drawn from me this unsolicited testimonial in its favor.

J. R. MITCHELL.

Mr. President, Fathers and Gentlemen: We meet to-day upon those distant shores to surround the cradle-tree of American liberty, and to pour out our grateful sacrifices upon the altar of universal freedom. We, the grand children of the third generation, come together to commemorate a day made historic and immortal, by the illustrious deeds, and patriotic words of our great grandfathers nearly a century ago. We come not to participate in an idle ceremony, or to engage in a tuneless song, but rather to kneel at the shrine of our country's liberties, and join in the pure, sweet melody that lingers in the patriot anthems of a nation's praise. We come not to those others as does the cringing serf to the foot of the throne of despotic power, to kiss the hand that smites his manhood; but we come as full grown sovereigns with the impress of liberty upon our foreheads, and bearing in our hands the burnished sceptre of supreme power, to commemorate the day that vouchsafed to us the titles of kings and princes, and that made us sovereign rulers among the affairs of men. We come not with gifts of myrrh and spices to appease the wrath or secure the favor of a petty satrap, nor yet an imperial monarch, but rather as free American citizens, bearing with us the beloved emblem bathed so often in patriot blood, and moistened with a nation's tears, which speaks to us in language more eloquent than ever fell from the lips of man, of liberty, which whispers to us as it plays to the pure air of Heaven, its brilliant folds flashing in beauty and grandeur in the sunbeams, that we are freemen, that tells us of a nationality, of greatness, of protection, and of power; whose stripes of scarlet are emblematic of that priceless blood that was shed on our nation's altar for its establishment and preservation. We come not to-day to join in the angry warfare of political dispatations, but forgetting those elements of discord—as essay though they be in their place—we come together as fellow citizens, as American freemen; as dwellers beneath one flag; as the common recipients of a common national heritage, as sharers of the munificent blessings emanating from one great nation, as members of one common nationality, whose foundations are established in truth, and justice and equal rights, and whose glory fills the whole world, and flashes upward to the throne of God Himself, as the exponents of an eternal principle that shall yet find a recognition in every land and among every people, nation, tongue and creed, beneath the shining arch of the universe of God, which is full, free, untrammelled, civil, religious; and political liberty to all men. We come not to-day in the name of party, or sect, or section, or policy, or men, but rising as we may properly do, infinitely above all these, we come in the name of God, and Liberty, and Country, to pour forth our grateful oblations in the Continental sanctuary, and upon a nation's altar and to a nation's God, for the great blessings we are permitted to enjoy in this goodly land of ours that is bounded by mighty oceans, and which extends from the sunny waters of the tropics, to the ice clad seas of the arctic regions. And we are to-day, perhaps, more than ever reminded by the holy associations that cluster around the 4th day of July, as well as by the thrilling events through which our nation has passed during the past six years, of the principles of free government upon which our institutions are founded and they demand our consideration. We live in an eventful period of the world's history—a period in which the momentous question as to the true theory of government is being fully demonstrated, and although the grand results that are flowing from the solution of this great political religious problem are destined to crown our nation with immortal triumph, they are but the necessary and legitimate productions of the unconscious efforts of our pilgrim fathers put forth nearly two hundred and fifty years ago. It was in vain that the mighty sons of the old world strived in their efforts to establish a firm foundation for civil liberty on the basis of religious freedom; it was in vain that Mary the Fourth of Scotland, Aitolph of Sweden, and still later Cromwell in England, although one of the greatest saviors of civilization, [illegible] to call to their aid the power, and [illegible] not monarchies, labored to effectuate the establishment of civil liberty on the basis of religious freedom. It was in vain the battle of the Prague was fought and the fields of Germany drenched with the purple current of contending hosts during a period of over thirty years, wherein the great contest was for the supremacy of the doctrine of civil liberty upon the basis of religious freedom. History has fully demonstrated the fact that it was the wise purpose of him at whose command nations rise and fall that the accomplishment of this great work of political reform should be committed to other hands and upon the shores of the new world; and casting our eyes back through the winding avenues of two centuries and a half, we find an humble colony gathered from the humble walks of life, fleeing from the proscriptions imposed by an oppressive religious intolerance, without prestige or sympathy, for aid, friendless and alone, self expatriated from country, and home for conscience sake, they clear the Mayflower for the distant and then unexplored regions of America, bearing with them the seeds of a new republic, and although they were doubtless unconscious of the results that were destined to flow from their labor, it must be conceded that they had much to do with the formation of that grand substrate of religious and political liberty which to-day supports upon its sure and firm basis the grandest structure of Republican Government ever devised by man. While the wealth of kings and conquerors, and the giant influence of the kingdoms of the old world were impotent and wholly powerless agents in the great work of political reform, whereby the people might be secure in the protection of a Government based upon the eternal principles of liberty, and when the armed hosts of fanaticism and political adventure, after long years of bloody warfare had fallen back defeated and overwhelmed, but to draw the closest around them the icy fetters of religious and political proscription, here upon these distant shores of America, hidden from the gaze of nations and unobserved by the world, were the Pilgrim Fathers, silently but surely carving out and firmly establishing the great corner-stone of free government, and upon which to-day rests in sublime beauty and immovable security the proudest temple of time, and while it is true that there never has existed and still exists among a certain class a sentiment that originated in a virulent opposition to everything that smacked of free government, and which has come down to us upon the breeze of a corrupt public opinion through the last six or seven generations, to the effect that the Pilgrim fathers were but a few narrow minded bigots driven by unwarranted discontent and unreasonable disaffection from the shores of Holland to those of America, the unjustness of such a sentiment is clearly manifest to the unprejudiced mind which can view their lives and characters through the unerring mirror of a correct and faithful history. That they had their frailties no one can doubt, that they were possessed of prejudices and errors drawn from their devotion to sect and the influences of the age in which they lived, amounting at times even to intolerance and proscription among themselves, we are ready to admit, that they did not at all times recognize in others the rights which they themselves claimed, is a deplorable fact, but, nevertheless, they were men characterized by that great principle, a pure and profound religious faith that has given shape and impulse, and character and beauty, and perfection to all the grand movements of the modern world." Hear them as in the dark hour of trial speaking through their Robinsons and Brewsters at the Crowning Court of St. James for aid in their perilous undertaking, they use these memorable words:

"We do verily believe and trust that God is with us, unto whom and whomsoever we have given ourselves in many trials" and that

He will graciously prosper our endeavors according to the simplicity of our hearts. Such was the humble sentiment that burned in the bosoms of the early patriots who first prepared the soil upon New England's shores for the reception of the kernel from which sprang the giant tree of Constitutional liberty, and it was this same spirit of calm resignation and Christian fortitude that dispelled the dark clouds of future danger as they pressed onward up through that Colonial condition, and this same spirit which enabled their posterity and our ancestry over a half later to solemnly publish and declare in the face of the kingly power of England and of her allies and sympathizers in the old world, that the United Colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent States, proclaiming it as they did in the majesty of their firm and unflinching purpose with that immortal sentiment and declaration of self evident truth, the just and mighty import of which is just now beginning to be fully realized and appreciated by the nations of the earth, namely: "That all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." This was the declaration of a self evident and eternal truth solemnly uttered by our revolutionary sires in Hall of Independence Hall at Philadelphia, ninety one years ago to day. Oh! may that old Hall, around which so many glorious associations connected with the achievement of American liberty cluster, stand forever. In the language of one of America's noblest and most gifted orators the illustrious sage of Ashland:

Let time, rospent and violence spare it, and the ruthless hand of embellishment have mercy upon it. Let every stone and every brick, and every plank, and every bolt from the foundation to the pinnacle be sacred. Let the rains of Heaven fall softly on the roof and the ruthless winds flow after beat gently at the door. Let it stand to the end of time, second only to Mount Vernon as the sanctuary of American patriotism." And the day, on which, and from which we date the birth of this great nation was an eventful one, surely in the history of America, but of free government throughout the World—a day without a parallel as one that marks the morning boundary of great events in the history of the government in all the long ages of the past—a day that has become not only brilliant in valiant deeds of patriotism, but is the great polar star to which the eyes of oppressed humanity in every clime are reverently turned as they contemplate the deeds of patriotism and enduring worth that have rendered immortal the birthday of American Liberty. And oh, how shall I rise to the dignity and grandeur of an occasion that commemorates the birth of Liberty? What words, not touched with the fires of inspiration, may be employed by him who attempts to speak to the American people on this anniversary of an eventful day, that shall breath even the faintest whisperings of that mighty spirit of enthusiasm and patriotic joy that the annual recurrence of this day inspires in the hearts and minds of a free and independent people. How shall I speak to day of that solemn hour which beheld our patriot fathers when standing within the sacred walls of Independence Hall, they cast their lives in the balance upon the side of freedom and Constitutional Liberty, and against the proscriptions and fearful threatenings of the vaunted ruler of the world? The events of that hour have proven to be the great moral and political bulkhead that has stemmed the raging billows of a corrupted aristocratic, and monarchical power, that came rushing down like a relentless torrent through the fairest fields of earth, submerging the fires of liberty from the earliest periods of time. Then it was that the spirit of royalty and kingly authority was flung back across the waters of old ocean, and in its stead the immortal principles of a free government based upon the consent of the governed and which had lain in embryo in the hearts and minds of a colonial people for nearly two long centuries, flamed forth in sublime beauty and eternal grandeur, casting a cheering ray of brightness, and hope, and joy, away down along the future pathway of coming ages. The men of that day, such as Adams, Franklin, Hancock, Livingston, and last but not least, the venerated father of our country, the peerless Washington, as well as a host of others, who were the principal actors in his great work of political reformation, treated the cause of civil liberty not only as one of justice and right, of sentiment and feeling, but also one of history and tradition, of charters and laws, and thus regarding it, they deemed their lives but a paltry sacrifice when compared with the innumerable blessings and world-wide results for good that were to flow to their posterity by its successful vindication, and daring to maintain what courage and love of liberty had impelled them to assert, we behold the infant flag of the young but rising nation borne forward upon the bloodstained battle-fields of the revolution, while the valiant hosts of liberty led forward by the immortal Washington, whose prudence, and probity, and patriotism, were the crowning jewels of his life, come forth from the first revolution bearing with them the glorious sceptre of liberty all radiant with the glory of an enduring fame. But the success of the Revolution of the Colonies against that spirit of aristocratic aggression that induced it, was but the legitimate result of a severe and terrible conflict between the directly opposite elements of truth and error, liberty and oppression, the principles of free government and those of a haughty and imperious monarchy. Not only the testimony of all christendom aside from England—but even that of men of the highest character of talent in England justifies the Colonies in this great struggle for independence. When the stamp act caused a wave of indignation to roll from one end of this habitable continent to another, inducing a burst of manly opposition from a noble but justly indignant people, Lord Chatham declared in tones of thrilling eloquence that caused the guardians of the British throne to tremble in their seats, "I rejoice that America has resisted." The no less eloquent Burke expressed the same sentiment, and in his efforts at conciliation and giving further expressions to his sympathy for America, declared 'my hold of the Colonies is in the close affection which grows from common names, from kindred blood, from similar privileges and equal protection, these are ties which though light as air are as strong as links of iron," and in a speech of eloquence and power he vindicated the Colonies from the unjust reproach cast upon them by the relentless George III of having turned the issues at civil liberty into a monetary question, and he reminds the House of Commons that the great contests for freedom in England were from the earliest periods of her history chiefly the results of causes similar to those that were then pending on the Colonies to a justifiable and desperate resistance against the mother country. And even as late as 1850 the justness of the American revolution was admitted by Lord John Russell in a speech before the British Parliament in these remarkable words "Go looking back," says he, "to the origin of that contest, the American Revolution, I cannot but think it was not a single error, or single blunder, which got us into that contest, but a series of repeated blunders, of a policy asserted and then retreated from, again asserted then concessions made when they were too late, and of obstinacy when it was unreasonable. I believe," says he further, "it was by such a course we entered into that unhappy contest, with what were at its beginning loyal provinces of England." The patriots of the Revolution stand, then, not only justified by their own enemies, but applauded by the whole civilized world for the rectitude of their action in the dark days of the agony of our Nation's birth, "when the blood red star of her liberties was rising through gold and dubious clouds." And we would be false to duty upon this occasion were we in our admiration for the illustrious defenders of our nation's life in these later years—to forget the fundamental principles of a free government—the fathers of our republic, the architects of our cherished system of free government. Their names and their lives can not, must not be passed over in silence while we celebrate the anniversary of the birthday of freedom. They must be gratefully remembered by the people of this great nation through all the ages of the future while this government shall stand as a proud and enduring monument of their patriotic skill. They will continue to live and shine forth with undying lustre, and unfading beauty as bright and burning lights in the remembrance of their posterity forever and forever.

> These [like the immortal soul] shall endure the Empire of decay
> When time is old, and world is have passed away,
> Cold in the soil their pearl in hearts may lie,
> But that which warmed them once can never die.

But while we would keep in sacred remembrance all these considerations, dear as they are to every true American heart, we would not forget the open record history of our Nation, its terrible conflicts, its dreadful and heart rending trials and its glorious and overwhelming triumphs; and let us here premise that while our early sires, in order to form a more perfect union, had substituted in lieu of the Articles of Confederation by which an union, or partnership of States alone had existed, a constitution founded in wisdom, and matured by the ablest minds of the Revolution, whereby not merely an union or partnership of States but "a more perfect union" of the whole people was effected, they tacitly and indirectly admitted in that same constitution a dangerous heresy which in less than three quarters of a century well nigh proved its overthrow as also the destruction of our Republic and this heresy consisted in the simple fact that the full spirit and meaning of that sentiment contained in the Declaration of Independence which declares that "all men are created equal and have certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" was not incorporated into this great Magna Charta of our institutions and although for over eighty years this same constitution remained as the palladium of our liberties dispensing life and light, and giving impulse, and energy, and power to the Nation, there still lurked within its honored folds that hidden seething dangerous serpent of implied toleration of the iniquitous system of human slavery, that once cast its blighting shadow over our otherwise fair and happy land. And this hidden viper, and dire enemy of human liberty and free government, gathering strength and maturity and mighty strength and power engendered by that other equally infamous doctrine of State supremacy as understood and advocated by Southern rebels and fanned by a spirit of selfish unyielding and big tea[illegible] and tainted ambition kept forth life [illegible] against this God-given an[illegible] high handed and unjustifiable rebellion against our Government than which none so ignoble, nor so culpable or terrible over yet existed in all the annals of the world and borne forward supported and sustained, as well by its own inherent forces as by that external sympathy and aid which it received from the enemies of free government among the nations of the old world, like a mighty giant of wrath it seized to destroy our government, make desolate the homes and subvert the liberties of over thirty millions of people. And as rebellion grew in proportions and power and advanced with fire and sword towards the demolition of our sacred birth right, clothed as it was in all the abhorrent attributes of cruelty, barbarity, and treason, it cast before it a wave of national patriotism in the North and West, such as never before aroused the united energies of any people, and which like a mighty deluge overwhelmed and obliterated for a time all party lines and party names. The great immovable leaders and men of talent and patriotism of all political parties in whose bosoms swelled a solitary emotion of love for the old Star Spangled Banner, became brethren of one political faith, the great cardinal principle of which was an unqualified and uncompromising devotion to a common country. They stood up as one platform, the central plank of which was "the Union must and shall be preserved." They respond[illegible] but one call and that was the trembling voice of the struggling Goddess of Liberty crying for a swift deliverance from the accursed fangs of treason. They rallied around but one banner and that was the nation's flag, the tri colored emblem of American liberty. The dread issue presented and insisted on by parricides and traitors, terrible as it was, was fairly and promptly met by a loyal and devoted people. Never since the world began was there such a putting forth of patriotic power in defence of the right, as was presented by our Government when assailed by the late infamous rebellion. It was a new epoch in our Nation's history, a mighty revival of that spirit of patriotism that animated our patriot fathers in the days of the Revolution upon the one hand, warring against the longed hosts of treason upon the other. It was the principles of free men and constitutional liberty paraphrased in law and order planted for the mighty conflict, against the presumptuous aggressions of slavery, supported, encouraged, and borne onward by treason and rebellion. It was the immortal principle asserted by the founders of this mighty empire of Government ninety one years ago to day, arrayed in the garments of purity and light, sustained by a law abiding, devoted and patriotic people on the one side and the accursed doctrines of secession and disunion, the legitimate offspring of a slave holding aristocracy, upheld by the treasonable hordes of Southern rebels on the other. It was in a word the sword of eternal justice unsheathed, and directed by the unerring hand of the Great King of Nations, going forth to battle with and subdue that dark spirit of destruction which dwelt in the abodes of error whose works were those of assassination, rapine, and indiscriminate slaughter, which has deluged our land with blood, that has perpetuated barbarisms in the torture and starvation of thousands of our fellow men, at the mention of which the heart of humanity sickens and over which religion, veiling her face in sorrow, pours out her tears of regret and bitter anguish. That same spirit of error, which, not content with the blood of a million victims won upon the the field of carnage, dared, in the last deaththroes of its expiring existence, and when this death rattle was knocking in its throat, to invade the chambers of the Executive Mansion of this great nation, and there, in the name of Liberty, make a last desperate thrust at the overthrow of Government, and law, and order, and religion, and all that is dear to the heart of man, by adding to its roll of accumulated infamy the barbarous atrocity of assassination. The issue presented then by the rebellion was one of national life, or national death, it was a conflict in which the doctrines enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, ninety-one years ago to day, were placed upon trial, and they have passed through the fiery ordeal of battle; they have been tested amid the clashing of contending steel, upon many a well fought battle-field; they have been tried in the fiery furnace of public opinion, and although at times they have appeared for the moment to be lost in the surrounding gloom, they have as often re appeared, gleaming forth more brilliantly than before by reason of the darkness with which they were surrounded, like the rays of the silvery Queen of Night, which appear more brilliant as they break through the passing clouds, and to day they shine forth in sublime beauty, and olden grandeur, regenerated, purified, redeemed, and sanctified by the precious blood of thousands of the noblest sons of earth, and the tears of an numbered widows and desolate orphans, and by the united prayers of a christian and patriot people, and when we cast our eyes to the eastward and upon the unsanguined fields of Virginia and Maryland, and Pennsylvania, and Tennessee, and Georgia, and other of our sister States, we see depicted that life and death struggle between the hosts of loyalty and the cohorts of treason, between truth and error, Liberty and Slavery, Government and anarchy, between the immortal and self evident principles that "all men are created equal," and the political heresy that some men are born to be slaves, we are admonished not only by the blood-stained fields before us, but by all history, sacred and profane, as well as by that "divinity that stirs within us," that there are certain great principles that cannot be subjugated or destroyed, certain immortal truths which can never die, and second only in interest and importance to the religion of the world's Redeemer as that great system of political truth which recognizes the inalienable rights of religious freedom and the civil equality of man. It was the struggling of such an element that caused the Roman Empire to be checquered by the fearful and bloody plowshare of war. It was for this the plains of Greece were reddened with human blood. It is the same principle that has been struggling for existence for over half a century against the warring factions of an ambitious aristocracy upon the one hand, and a spirit of absolutism upon the other in unruly France. It was for the vindication of this great truth our Revolutionary Fathers braved the dangers and perils of the Revolution, and it was to preserve this sacred inheritance from the hand of the despoiler, and to perpetuate and pass it down unimpaired to the future generations of coming time, that thousands of the noblest sons of America have, during the four long years of the late terrible strife in our own land, been stationed upon the tented field, rallying around the standard of the Union, and bearing aloft, with the strong arm of battle, the starry flag of this Republic, and how nobly the patriots of this land have done their part in this trying hour of its new birth has already passed into and become a part and parcel of the history of this nation. Around the sacred inheritance transmitted to us by a patriot ancestry were gathered the loyal thousands of our land as by the touch of a magic wand, when the sound of the first rebel gun upon the Star of the West announced the signal on the part of rebeldom for the beginning of the dread carnival of blood, and there around the altar of their nation's liberties they remained until the scattering hosts of treason, overwhelmed in their mad career, were compelled to flee to the dark corners of the earth to escape a punishment as just as it was swift and terrible, in the complete demolition of the pride and power of the rebel Confederacy, and although this day may witness the leaders of this most infamous high-handed rebellion bathing in the sunshine of executive clemency, and receiving the congratulations of those who sympathized with them in their treasonable and sanguinary assaults against liberty and free government, and who now pride themselves in crying out, mercy, mercy, mercy, leniency and forgiveness to those leaders whose treasonable eloquence first fired the Southern mind and plunged them into the fearful horrors of internal war, and whose hands, wreaking with the blood of innocence, and of liberty itself, were raised to smite this mighty nation and tear her shining stars from the great central sun of her nationality. Although the rising sun of this morning may witness all those things, still there is a voice that comes up from the thronged sepulchres of the patriot dead who fell in defence of liberty and which mingles with the intelligent patriotic sentiment of millions of loyal freemen all over this broad land which shall pervade the leaders of the late rebellion like the swift winged lightnings of heaven that flash in angry fury across the storm clouds above, and shall consign them to a place in history where future generations shall know them only as traitors to liberty, and as would be the star eyes of the best government on earth, and while we would rejoice to day that the scourge of the war chariot has ceased, and that our Government has been maintained and liberty and equal rights secured, and while we would extend the hand of friendship to the deluded masses who now manifest a sincere desire to become loyal citizens of our republic we have no word of pity no word of clemency—at least I have not—for such men as Jefferson Davis and other leaders for I would hold them responsible, legally and morally, before God and the world, for a crime as dark as fowls imagining and so far from restoring them to power I would have their names forever lost in the dark and bloody roll of infamy with which they themselves have surrounded them.

War, although a most fearful scourge, sometimes is unavoidable. Although its track is marked with lines of sanguinary horror, at which humanity sickens, still war has its glorious results. And who can look back to the issues of the late war, and to the termination of those momentous issues and not feel a pride in the patriotism of the people that alone by war conquered treason and saved liberty. Although there are those who were found opposing the war for the maintenance of this Union and who were willing to barter away the liberties of this people for a transitory peace, the time will come when their children and their children's children, as they shall be scattered up and down this goodly land when they meet together to celebrate this day will look up to the glorious old stars and stripes, made sacred by the blood of their ancestors and as they gaze upon that proud banner as the emblem of their liberties they will proclaim in rapture as numbers increase that that which saved that flag and preserved American liberty. Oh, who can contemplate the history of this country for the past six years and then doubt the justice and patriotism upon the part of the Government in prosecuting the late war to a successful termination? That history is replete with facts and incidents more glorious in character than ever before shone forth from the pages of any historian—and which when rightly understood and comprehended must forever dispel all doubts as to the justice of a war that preserved our republic. Such deeds of patriotism, such unanimity of action such bold daring, persevering courage, as are there recorded, must be the passport that will justly entitle the men who fought our battles to the favorable consideration and grateful remembrance of succeeding generations alike the native born citizen and the brave patriot whose eyes first beheld the glad light of day upon the Green Emerald Isle alike the patriotic German, and the noble valiant Pole—in a word, alike the loyal white man and the loyal black man, were found at their post. Upon the plains of Selloh, where the fiery missiles of death thundered forth in one broad sheet of liquid flame upon the hills of Gettysburg where the invincible Hancock turned the tide of battle, in the banks of the Potomac and Rappahannock where the livid streams grew dark with the crimson tide of life, and the craggy hills were moistened with the blood of patriots, upon the wide spread savannahs of the South where the immortal Sherman led forth his valiant armies from Atlanta to the sea"—and boarded the fierce lion of treason in his own secession den,—along the indented shores of the Atlantic where the proud mistress of the seas—the American navy, battered down the strongholds of rebellion, in the hands of the illustrious Farragut Dupont and Porter, and a host of others whose names are great in the praise of the American people, the way was prepared for a speedy and glorious triumph and around the invested Richmond, where the invincible and unerring Grant planted the flag of liberty upon the parapets of the very citadel of treason,—in short, wherever danger appeared, or duty called, there were found these defenders of our nation's life keeping their duty and nightly vigils around the besieged temple of human liberty, until finally the last throne of expiring rebellion proclaimed the joyful tidings to the world that treason was vanquished, that a new birth was given to our nation whose morning and whose evening star that shall continue to watch over us in all coming time shall be the genius of universal liberty to the children of men. Let the intelligent citizen of to day carefully study the cost and the accruing benefits of the late war and then will be prepared to declare, that although the cost was great, the results for good were greater still. True it is, that when we contemplate every effort that was put forth by this government in the late terrible crisis; when we reflect upon the vast amount of blood and treasure, of heart rending agony and sore trial, that are to be accounted as a part and parcel of our cost in this mighty struggle; when we look around to find the nation one vast house of mourning, our fields moistened with the blood of our kindred and fellow men, their uncultivated graves dotting every hill side, we will naturally enquire, for what purpose must all these things need be? was there any object to be attained? any cause to be avoided? any immortal truth to be vindicated? or any eternal principle to be perpetuated that is of such vital importance to the American people as to amount to a full and adequate consideration for all this incalculable cost of human happiness, of precious blood and valuable treasure? But when we realize the importance of the great issues of the war, that had been made up between the rebel hosts and slave aristocracy of the South and the government of the United States, when we realize that upon the result of those issues depended not only the future existence and grandeur, and glory of this Republic, but also the fondest hopes of Religion and civil Liberty, and Constitutional freedom in the world, we cannot be at a loss in determining this momentous question. It was simply a question as to whether or not this government was worth preserving at any cost. As to whether human liberty was worth fighting for, or Constitutional freedom was worthy of a struggle. And when the dark cloud of rebellion settled down upon our land and treason usurped our national existence—all these questions were of easy solution to the true patriot of whatever name or party. He contemplated his country in all its mighty grandeur, its wide domain of territory stretching from ocean to ocean and from lake to gulf, including within its boundaries its myriad silvery rivers which bear on from State to State upon their queenly palaces, the wealth of this great empire, he casts his eye upon its towering mountains whose snow capped peaks of eternal white are so emblematic of the purity of the principles of free government, he turned to behold its trifle ten thousand verdant hills and picturesque vales that stretch out in all the sublime beauty and moral grandeur of a living paradise, where the peopled millions of his fellow men had dwelt together in the holy bonds of fraternal love, he remembered the history of his pilgrim fathers; he turned to the dark days of the Revolution, that gave birth to the nation, and 1812, that vindicated its honor, he contemplated, step by step, the onward march of intelligence and virtue, he marked the progress of science and art as they displayed their cunning handiwork all over our beloved land; his mind recurred to the growth, magnitude and increasing prosperity of his country as exhibited in its ten thousand peopled towns and cities, its schools, and academies, and colleges, its great National Capitol, the pride of the nation, its State capitols, that fill their respective places in the arch of national unity, its military schools, and asylums of arts, and insane asylums, and asylums for the education of the deaf and dumb, its infirmaries and hospitals, and orphan asylums, its theological and commercial, and scientific and literary institutions, her system of legal jurisprudence, the grand result of the combined wisdom of men and ages, and above all, its system of free government, that may well challenge the admiration of the world, all having for their purpose the elevation of man, all intended to lead him onward and upward in the scale of being and intelligence; and last but not least, he turns to the proud flag of his country, that emblem of Liberty, the honored memento of the venerated fathers of the Republic, that banner that is the hope of the patriot, the joy of scholar and the theme of the poet, and which engages the last earthly thought of the patriot soldier as he wraps its crimson folds around him as his winding sheet and lays down to die upon the field of battle, that flag whose honored folds are on this gala day of Liberty floating proudly from the flag staff of our country's wells in every harbor and upon every sea where American is found, or liberty loved, as a wand of protection to our countrymen, whether it be in waters of the Pacific or the Atlantic, the Northern Southern or the Indian ocean, whether in the Gulf or the Channel, the Crimea or the Japan, whether pour the phrase of enlightened but proud and haughty England, or the knightly cities of the heathen world, that banner that has emerged from the late baptism of blood, bearing with it the crown of victory, and which to day floats more beautiful and triumphant than ever before, whose stripes of red wear a deeper crimson, for that they have been re dyed in the blood of martyrs; and when the living patriot contemplated all these things connected with his country, he could no longer be in doubt as to the justness of a war that could preserve them and pass them down unimpaired to future generations.

But while we celebrate the birth-day of American liberty, and recount the glories that cluster around the name of a Washington that gave us a Government, let us upon this occasion, with that same patriotic spirit which causes us to lay aside more party questions in paying tribute to the Father of our country, remember him who was a second Washington, and whose wisdom and ability preserved it. Treason and slavery, foiled in their mad attempts to destroy the Government, determined in the hour of their extremity to strike down its chief Representative head—the greatest champion of liberty the history of the world has ever known, and Abraham Lincoln fell by the assassin's hand in the hour of his greatest triumph. He died that liberty might live. His blood was wanting as the last and greatest sacrifice upon the altar of human liberty to appease the manes of human slavery. He is dead, but his name is immortal, his honored remains rest in peaceful security, and a nation's tears have poured forth like the summer rains over the tomb of the great departed. His fame lights up the pages of universal history while his name with that of Washington, is enshrined in the hearts and memories of his countrymen, and of the friends of liberty and free government throughout the nations of the world. May his last resting place, like the consecrated grounds of Mount Vernon, ever be regarded as holy ground, may the hand of the despoiler spare it and may the mellowing rays of summer sing sweetly around it, and the wild winds of winter breathe softly upon it. May the friend of liberty and humanity, of this and other lands, approach with becoming reverence that spot made sacred by the dust of the sleeping patriot, and may his name like that of Washington be taught to our children, and our children's children. May it be lisped by the tongues of innocence and chanted by the songs of childhood, and be reverently spoken by the lips of old and quivering age away down in the history of coming time, when the marble monuments that shall rise to his memory all over this land shall have crumbled to dust.

But let us not upon this occasion forget the present in fact to attempt to read the future. The present in fact I fear has passed, and the mental powers have been brought into requisition. The soldier reclines upon his laurels but the statesman is armed for the mighty conflict of mind, stands equipped for the contest in the nation's forum and as in the hour of battle we looked with confidence and hope to the soldiers who fought our battles to save our nation from the hand of violence and blood, so to day we must look to the statesman to rebuild the shattered temple of our liberties upon a base that treason, conspiracy, rebellion and time itself can never move. To the Representatives of this nation do we look, not only to provide a way whereby the deluded thousands in the South shall be enabled to return again to duty and loyalty but also to wipe out forever by the potential force of the legislative pen of this nation, the last vestige of that spirit of perfidy and treason that still lingers in the arteries of the Southern heart, and when cleansed of that fatal virus, it need be by the more stern and summary studies of military rule than to restore the fallen stars to their places around the central sun of our great nationality. Yes, fondly and earnestly do the people of this nation look forward to that hour when those supports to the symmetry and strength of our nationality shall be reared again in more than their primal beauty and moral and physical grandeur.

These States went down to their temporary graves in the wo[illegible] of slavery, but they shall at the appointed time be resurrected and brought forth in all the glory and strength of a new life, wherein shall dwell the spirit and power of liberty. They went down for a time at the command of traitors. They shall come forth in the morning of their new birth at the will of loyal representative freemen. They were buried beneath the standard of rebellion and with the folds of the Stars and Bars around them as their winding sheet, they shall again arise from their sleeping tombs and rend asunder the fragile cerements of their dishonored graves and come forth under the protection of the standard of patriotism, with the starry banner of freedom waving over and around them. They chased to breathe in unison with the great central artery of national life by reason of the miasmatic atmosphere of State supremacy in which they sought alone to exist. They shall again awake from their stupor and breathe the pure air of national sovereignty. But this work of reconstruction of a nation terribly convulsed by the rude thunderbolts of war is not one of a single day, or a single year. These States that were swallowed up by the insatiate gulf of slavery like the fabled Metus by the jealous and grasping Jupiter, will not spring forth in an instant from the convulsed and aching body politic like the goddess Minerva armored and full clad from the brain of Jove. Beautiful and glorious though they be when they shall arise from their ashes in the coming morning of their resurrection, we must wait with patience the appointed hour, for it is a process that requires alike the wisdom of men and the lapse of time. The Venus of Phidias was not fashioned and formed in an hour, to have conceived it even were a mighty step in advance by the world renowned sculptor, and that statesman who in this hour of our nation's history is unable to rise above the slavish bonds of partyism and the passions and prejudices of the hour, and conceive the true plan of full, final and complete restoration of these States to the full exercise of all their functions, has taken a grand stride in the great highway of American statesmanship, that justly entitles him to the grateful remembrance of the American people. Yes the work of replacing the fallen pillars, and rebuilding the shattered temple is a mighty work, that well may claim the greatest efforts of the master minds of America. It is a work in which the hand that is soiled with treason should have no part or parcel, and in which the mind that encouraged national perfidy should give no directing thought, in short, it is a work for the loyal representatives of the nation, and that work has been well begun upon a foundation as broad as the principles of our humanity, and as firm as the loyal sentiment that devised it. And as that work progresses step by step, and as our nation gradually rises as it must from the anarchy into which it was plunged by the fiery waves of a fearful war, and as her people, forgetting all animosity, and strife, and hatred, shall again unite in one common brotherhood, when the fallen stars shall return to their places in the bright orbit of their former glory, then will this nation stand as the world's exemplar, in all that pertains to greatness, without a rival to excite her envy, or a foe to cause her to fear. And who, I enquire, is so incredulous as to doubt the future stability and glory of this new nation, so great in territory, in people, in resources, in learning and in the glory of its name—a nation, which in the very hour of its calamity, has been enabled to extend her territory to the icebergs that loom up in threatening grandeur around the Northern pole itself, and how significant the fact, that the mighty Russia should relinquish her strong foothold upon this continent; what a mark of obeisance to the majesty of our position as a nation! What an acknowledgement of the importance of the influence and power of our nation, in the event she permits their exercise in the giant conflicts that may soon convulse the kingdoms of the old world, and well may England, through her leading journal, speak in trembling accents of the importance of a nation that extends from the Rio Grande to the North pole, and from the Isthmus to the Straits of Kamschatka, that is seated forever on two great oceans and which holds and wields at pleasure the key to the nations of the earth. Let us then, fellow citizens of this great nation, upon this gold day of American freedom, as we cast our eyes across the map of nations to see them rise, and fall, and pass away to the dread charnel house of departed empires, be enabled to turn to our own dear land and in the beautiful language of the poet Bryant declare:

> "But thou, my country, thou shalt never fall
> Save with the child-ion, thy maternal care—
> Thy loveliest love thy blessings showered on all,
> These are thy tokens, sons and stormy air,
> Are the wide barriers of thy borders, where
> Among thy gallant sons that guard the well,
> Thou toughest at cannon's who shall then declare
> The date of the deep founded strength, or hell
> How happy in thy lap the sons of men shall dwell!"
